EARLY TREATIES GOOD BASIS FOR NEW PEACE MOVE

Acceptance of Briand Offer Would Carry on Pre-War Arbitration Efforts

RECORD SHOWS EUROPE LEADING RECENT WORK

United States Found Lagging in Trend to Give Wider Scope to Agreements

SPECIAL PROM MONITOR BUREAU

WASHINGTON — Adding to the widespread interest in the Briand proposal for a Franco-American treaty of permanent peace, the declarations of two United States senators that they intend to put forward resolutions in Congress for the renuncialutions in Congress for the renuncia-tion of war have focused attention on the American arbitration and con clifation treaties now extant. These pacts form the basis from which statesmen must work in their announced efforts to induce more active merican participation in the world ovement for peace. The rapid growth in number and ation upon the progress of the ace movement in America, and ends of the proposals made by lliam E. Borah (R.), Senator from William E Borah (R.), Senator from Idaho, and Arthur Capper (R.), Senator from Kansas, have pointed out that the policy of arbitration has held a recognized place in American diplomacy for more than a century, the Jay Treaty of 1794 with Great Britain being frequently accounted the beginning of modern arbitration. There is also a record of America's early part in the arbitration movement in a clause of the Treaty of Guadaloupe Hidalgo signed between the United States and Mexico in 1848. This clause, the fruit of agitation which began with the formation of the New York and Massachusetts Peace Societies in 1815, was qualified with the provision that either nation might refuse arbitration if that method was "deemed by it altogether incompatible with the tion if that method was it altogether incompatible with the nature of the dispute."

It altogether incompatible win the nature of the dispute."

Historic and Present Interest
Although none of the several arbitrations and peaceful settlements made between the two countries seems to have been based upon this treaty, its historical interest is seems to have been based upon this treaty, its historical interest is seems to have been based upon this treaty, its historical interest is seems to have been planed upon Dwight W. Morrow's entry into the Mexican capital as United States Ambassador. In contrast to the culticus limitations of the arbitration article of 1848, the drafts monoficially proposed for the Franco-American treaty illustrate the great growth which has taken place within less than a century in the field of subjects considered amenable to peaceful settlement. This broadening of the scope of arbitration had active American apontorship before the World War, but has continued its expansion since that "time principally in the Old

WITH ALBANIA This Act Is Seen as a Direct

Reply to the Franco-Jugoslav Pact

BY WINKLESS TIA POSTAL TELEGRAPH FROM HALIFAX ROME, Nov. 25-A treaty of definite efensive alliance between Italy and Albania was signed at Tirana on Nov. new situation in the Balkans, but merely strengthens and supplements the treaty of friendship and arbitra-

the two countries. The first impression which the new treaty gives an impartial observer is that it is a direct answer to Jugoslavia in the recent Franco-Jugoslav treaty, as well as a last warning by Italy to its eastern neighbor to keep its hands off Al-bania. A few days before Aristide Briand and Mr. Marincovitch signed their pact of friendship, the Italian their pact of friendship, the Italian newspapers expressed fresh alarm that Jugoslavia was contemplating a new coup in Albania, while the con-struction of the new military rail-ways recently undertaken by the Jugoslav Government in the direc-tion of the Albanian border confirmed the belief that Jugoslavia was hastily making war preparations in

Anti-Italian Demonstrations

In spite of assurances given both by the French and Jugoslav Foreign Ministers that the treaty signed on Nov. 11 was an instrument of peace the way it was welcomed in Jugo-slavia by anti-Italian demonstrations which followed its signature in many Jugoslav towns had a most disturb ing effect here on Italian public opinion, as the counter demonstra tions proved that it was actually directed against Italy, and as a guarantee given by France to Jugoslavia that the latter would be free in pur-suing its policy of intrigue in the Balkan peninsula, thus checking Italian penetration and menacing Italian interests.

The new treaty which consists of seven short clauses, opens with a preamble in which the purpose of the alliance is clearly defined.

After emphasizing their mutural desire to devote their efforts to eliminate the causes which might en-danger the peace existing between them and other states, the contracting parties is reaffirming that the in-terests and security of the two coun-tries are interdependent, solemnly proclaim their determination to con-clude a treaty of defensive alliance "sole object is the stabilizawhose ion of the natural relations happily

Friendship of Two Peoples

The faithful and strict observance of all treaties concluded between Italy and Albania after the latter's admission to the League of Nations will assure the sincere and perfect friendship between the two peoples and their governments and will promote reciprocal assistance in such a way that each contracting party will uphold the interests of the other with a zeal equal to that shown in

"On the other hand, though measurably restricted by existing federal relations incident to the visa and head tax, Mexican labor is adapted to such conditions, the source of supply is in the immediate vicinity to the demand and common labor is obtainable when and as needed, a condition of first consideration to our agricultural welfare and which cannot be subjected to such immigration to be subjected to such immigrations are attached to the surface of t the protection of its own.

No Independent Negotiations Should all efforts at conciliation fail, each party is bound to place at the disposal of its ally all its resources, military and financial as well as every other assistance which may contribute to winning the con flict. In case of war neither party will invite independent negotiations for peace or an armistice. An interesting feature of the treaty is the annexe containing two letters ex-changed between Ilias Bey Vrioni, Albanian Foreign Minister, and Ugo Sola, the Italian Minister at Tirana,

Policy of Compulsory Arbitration Adopted in Settlement of All Future Disputes

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU WASHINGTON - International laws to govern radio communication have been formulated by the 400 delegates and technical experts of 76 nations who have been deliberating here for the last seven weeks at the International Radio Telegraph Conference. The convention drawn up by the conference is to become effective January 1, 1929, at which time all nations wishing to be bound by its provisions shall have ratified it. That the largest international conference of history "has been able to sit together for a period of seven weeks, and, without any important disagreement, to reach a unanimous conclusion upon so highly a techni-cal and so difficult a problem is in itself not only a sign of progres-sive capacity of the world to solve international problems, but it is a fine tribute to the character and spirit of the delegations from all these nations," declared Herbert Hoover, president of the conference, radio in international combination To understand the content of the 60 provisions in the treaty which the delegates have drawn up and signed, and the 26,000 words required to give expression to it, founded, as it is upon over 150 different commit-tee reports, according to Mr. Hoover, "involves a technical knowledge of electrical physics which is naturally outside of the profession of all but specialists. Among the major accomplishments of the conference was the allocation of frequencies among the different international services so as to utilize them most efficiently and to minimize interference. The last confer-enc, held in London in 1912, dealt only with a few frequencies. The bulk of the services in use today have been developed since that time and each demands its place in the ether The Washington Conference, through its technical committee, has as-signed the whole frequency range

The conference merely passed a resolution expressing a hope that such a fusion may be brought about in the near future. The United States and Can-ada opposed such an amalgamation inasmuch as they are not members of the Telegraph Union but hope to become signatory to the radio treaty. Arbitration, as a means of settling

The United States has in effect approximately 35 treaties providing for peaceful settlement of disputes, though a large portion of these are not immediately operative due to failure to fill vacancies on the arbi-tration commissions. Only two, those with Sweden and Liberia, have been negotiated since the war, and they are of the same type as those written by Elfhu Root in 1908.

Few Treatles Kept in Repair Out of the 21 conciliation treaties concluded during the Secretaryship of William J. Bryan, only those with China, Denmark, France, Great Brit-ain, Guatemala, Portugal, Russia, Spain, and Sweden have ever been in spain, and Sweden have ever been in working order, and at present only those with Denmark, Pertugal, and Sweden have full commissions, though the State Department has announced that the vacancy on the Norwegian commission will be filled.

The Bryan tractice provide for the commission will be filled.

The Bryan treaties provide for an inquiry and report by a permanent commission of five members in the case of any dispute of any nature which diplomacy may fail to adjust, and forbid hostilities during the inquiry, which may take as much as a year, but they do not make the deci-sion of the commission binding upon

One of these pacts, the Root-Jusserand Treaty, is with France, as was pointed out by the Administration at the time of the Briand address. Having been written and renewed for five-year periods, it will expire automatically on Feb. 27, 1928, unless reaffirmed. One of the Bryan treaties of 1914 also is with France, and the State Department has announced that it will put that arrangement into working order arrangement into working order by filling the post which Richard Olney held on the concillation com-

At least three Presidents of the United States since the opening of the century have sought to go farther in the arbitration movement than the United States Senate was willing to go. The treaties finally negotiated by Mr. Root were initiated three years earlier by John Hay as Secretary of State under instructions by President Roosevelt and were abandoned by Mr. Roosevelt in 1904 because the Senate insisted on a modification which would require a modification which would require a new treaty to be drawn and ratified stating the agenda of the arbitration in each case before arbitration could begin. This demand was acceded to in the Root treaties.

The Senate's exclusion from arbitration of matters affecting "vital interests" or "national honor" caused President Taft to abandon treaties with Great Britain and France providing a invitable for the state of the viding a jurisdiction for all types of disputes. The rejection of President Wilson's request for ratification of the Treaty of Versailles left the United States out of the conciliation machinery set up in the Council of the League of Nations.

A Post-War Model The United States is, however, signatory to one pact which is an important example of post-war con-cial privileges for none. The knowledge of the fact that the entire resources of our country are at the call of the President in case of an emergency will do much to prevent aggression on the part of any foreign power."

The Central American nations also have a machinery of peace in the international Central American Tributants set up at a conference in Washington in 1922-23, which follows the model of the Hague Tribunal rather than the World Court Each of the five states names six persons, of whom five are nationals, and these 30 jurists form a panel from which

Many treaties of this type were signed before the war between the outh American and Central Amercan countries themselves and also between them and various European countries. Since 1918 Switzerland has signed such treaties Argentina and Brazil.

It is impossible not to regard the Italo-Albanian treaty as an unpleasant sign, for it betrays the impetuosity of Italy and is clearly meant as a challenge to Jugoslavia. Moreover, the first Tirana treaty signed in November, 1926, might have been adjusted by discussions between Italy and Jugoslavia. This second Tirana treaty makes such second Tirana treaty makes such discussions more difficult, for it re-affirms Italy's interest in Albania in much more formal manner.

Articles 4 and 5 demand the put-ting of military, financial and other resources at the disposal of either party in the event of a defensive war and make any negotiations for expressing satisfaction at the conject to mutual consent. In practice this doesn't change the situation, for already in the 1926 treaty it was laid down that anything contrary to the status quo was, against the peace which can only consolidate the situation. The contraction independence, to which tants, which plainly meant that Italy might intervene militarily in certain

It is rather the emphatic attitude of Italy which is to be deprecated. It is regarded as possible that Jugoslavia will bring the matter before the Council of the League of Nations, holding the pact, which virtually makes Albania an Italian protectorate, to be incompatible with the torate, to be incompatible with the Covenant. But the whole subject of separate pacts is worthy of the closest attention.

The sentiment of thankfulness first found expression in the clear welcoming tones of the hymns played on the Mother Church chimes and was manifested during the entire service in expressions of gratitude for the beneficent and redemptive power of divine Love to heal all manner of disease and sin, to liberate thought from the limitations of matorial existence and to bring into human con-sciousness and experience the strengthening assurance of God's

Reading of Proclamation

After an organ prelude, the service was opened with the singing of Hymn No. 184, "Benevento," from the Christian Science Hymnal, beginning with the lines, Glory be to God on high, God whose glory fills the sky; Peace on earth to man forgiv'n, Man, the well beloved of heaven.

Man the well beloved of heaven.
This was followed by the reading by the First Reader of the Thanksgiving Proclamation of the President of the United States, recounting the prosperity and advancement enjoyed during the year and reminding that.
"While in gratitude we rejoice, we should humbly pray that we may be worthy of a continuation of divine orthy of a continuation of divine favor."

A Scriptural selection, I Chronicles 29: 10-13, was then read, and after a few moments of silent prayer, the congregation joined in the audible repetition of the Lord's Prayer with its spiritual interpretation as given in the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy. Hymn No. 225, "Evening Prayer," was next sung.

The reading of the special lesson-sermon on the subject "Thanks-kiving," as given in the Christian Science Quarterly, was then begun with the Golden Text, "Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!" (Psalma, 107.8) The congregation joined in the responsive reading, II Chronicles 5:2-7, 10, 13, 14.

The Second Reader then read citations from the Bible and the First Reader read correlative passages from Science and Health, these comprising the sermon. Among the Scriptural verses were those familiar words of Jesus recorded in John 15:9, 10, "As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you; continue ye in my love. If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love." Accompanying this came the words of the Christian Science taxtbook, "To keep the commandments of our Master and follow his example, is our proper debt to him and the only worthy evidence of our ample, is our proper debt to him and the only worthy evidence of our gratitude for all that he has done. There followed a solo and the announcement that time would be given for appropriate remarks and testimonies of thanksgiving, a privilege of which more than a score of members of the congregation availed themselves. NEW HAVEN, Conn.—While there search bodies in the United States, will not materially change Professor King's earlier estimates. If this is the best available statistics show that the American people are not yet prosperous in any absolute sense. In fact, four-fifths of them, or more than 90,000,000, seem to be making only a little over their expenses. They can lay up little, if anything, for a "rainy day." To this great majority President Coolidge's statement that the "test which now confronts the Nation is prosperity" can have little meaning.

Doubtless the whole Nation has reason to be thankful that it has so business men, many managers and fully recovered from the bitter want of 1921, when the standard of living of the great majority was far below a reasonable standard of health and of the great majority was an east-a reasonable standard of health and efficiency. Thus President Edgerton of the National Association of Manufac-turers, at its annual convention in Chattanooga, was moved to speak of the "abnormally high wages and lower living costs" of the "so-called working classes." These and similar utterances state explicitly or im-plicitly that prosperity has become so great and the incomes of the workers have become so large as to constitute a very real menace to our minds and morals. The average that American income in 1926, almost $90,000,000,000, had broken all records, was followed this month by confirming statistics from the Bureau of Internal Revenue at Washington. These statistics show that the aver rnese statistics show that the average annual income, per person gainfully employed, is now more than $2000 or nearly one-third more than the average income during the depression year 1921. This is a gratifying recovery but idoes not indicate unhealthy prosperity.

The National Bureau of Economic Research allows a possible error of 10 per cent in its estimates; it em-phasizes the provisional nature of the figures, which are based on in-dicators that include wage rates number of employees, dividend and interest payments and volume of trade. True, the estimate of total income made by the National Industrial Conference Board—$79,900, 000,000 during 1926—falls somewha more than 10 per cent short of the $90,000,000,000 estimate presented by the National Bureau of Economic Research. The estimates of Carl Snyder of the Federal Bank of New York and of W. R. Ingalls are still lower, being $77,000,000,000 and $74,-000,000,000, respectively.

But accepting the higher estimate of $90,000,000,000 income for 1926, so as to make the figures as favorable NEW YORK-Subways, elevated as possible, the available figures of income distribution indicate that more than 93,000,000 people, out of 117,000,000 living in the United States greater than the total world popula- in 1926, had about $500 of income

From these calculations it appears that the working classes cannot be getting wages that are higher than they need. Certainly we are not justified in fearing too much prosperity for the workers, or "more than they know how to spend."

But in view of the rapid gains in welfare achieved during the past six years, it is more than possible that our industrial machine may yet become so efficient as to provide a comfortable living for all, under a far higher standard than present levels of income permit.

HUNGARY CRIES FOR EQUITABLE EDUCATION LAWS

Effect of Numerus Clausus Is to Bar Many From Higher Education

BUDAPEST-It has long been felt gross injustice by liberal-minded Hungarians that higher education in Hungary should be based upon qualifications of nationality rather than of ability. Hitherto, entrance into the universities and high schools has been governed by Section 3 of the nerus Clausus Act of Sept. 26, 1920, which declares that, "At the salistment of prospective students, consideration should be given to the fact that the number of students drawn from the various nationalities must correspond with the relative strength which their particular nationality has in proportion to the whole population." The effect of this has been, of course, that Magyar students have been able much more easily to enter the higher seats of learning than have, for example, the Jews or the Slovaks.

Such a law also met with oppolearning than have, for example, the Jews or the Slovaks.

Such a law also met with opposition abroad, and the representatives of the Jewish Associations in France and England petitioned the Secretary-General of the League of Nations, Sir Eric Drammond, recently, to place the matter on the agenda of the December meeting of the League. For Hungary, through her Minister of Education, Count Klebelsberg, promised in 1925, at Geneva, to amend this act; but had hitherto failed to do so. Hungary is now, at Sir Eric Drummond's suggestion, considering the necessary changes. That it is not going to meet with the approval of large sections of the Hungarian public seems evident from the fact that a recent article on this subject in the Liberal paper Ax Est led to wild demonstrations of chauvinism in the capital. In the discussions, which have taken place in Parliament on this matter, Count Bethien has declared that, while the principle of the Numerus Clausus Act will be retained, the form in which it exists at present, and against which so much criticism has, been leveled, will be modified.

What the Masonic Fraternity and Predicated Organizations Are Doing Today The growing of sugar beets has always been one of the main occupations of the Belgian peasant and goes well together with their system of rotative farming and with the raising of heavy working horses. The sugar beet fields which cover the entire country, even the region of dunes along the seashore, occupy now a tatal of 70,632 hectares, as compared with 61,755 hectares in 1926. The last quantities of Belgian sugar from the past year's campaign were sold during the month of October to England, though at rather low prices, owing to the situation on the sugar market in New York, and to the Cuhan crisis. Large quantities of sugar beets are exported to France. The high duty on sugar makes it possible for the Freich sugar plants to offer high prices for sugar beets

34. Square and Compass—An Intercollegiate -Fraternity of Master Masons By WILLIAM M. BROWN, 32°, K T.

Square and Compass was founded May 12, 1917, at Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Virginia, and the wonder is that one or more similar organizations had not been established years before. Acacia, indeed, was its predecessor by 12 or 13 years, but Square and Compass took the lead among national organizations of a collegiate character. Mention of a Masonic club was made in the Washington and Lee college annual for 1897. Doubtless many similar organizations of a local nature had been in writteness at other institutions. Members of the club at Washington been in existence at other institutions. Members of the club at Washington and Lee thought that affiliation with the only existing intercollegiate Masonic organization at that time would help the club to do some really worth-while work on the college campus. Upon investigation it was found to be impracticable to petition Acacia for to the Belgian farmers.

Apples and pears are abundant in Belgium this year and are sold at comparatively low prices. The onion crops, which are a specialty in the country around Alost, are good and are exported on a large scale to England, on specially built ferry-boats.

Acacia required petitioning clubs to live in and maintain a house; (3) Acacia then had a rule which prevented in the following words of one of its most prominent members, Dr. James with fewer than 1500 students except world, then we, as a body of college many example of unselfishness to the world, then we, as a body of college men we should present the example within the Craft of faithful Master Masons trying to live as the example within the Craft of faithful Master Masons trying to live as best we know how with the teachings of Ereemasonry ever present in our lives and actions."

Although not more than 2 or 3 percent of American men go to college, more than 85 percent of our national and local leaders are college men. Hence the further necessity for an organization of the type of Square and Compass in the college world, with all the co-operation and stimulus which comes from a national orlus which comes from a national or-ganization rather than a local one. To date 52 squares have been established, some of them in the largest institutions in the country.

Acscis first came into being at University of Michigan in May of 1904. It was the outgrowth of a Masonic club which had existed on the Michigan campus for many years, but which had been ineffective as an association because of the absence of any strong bond among its members. Assuming the guise of a fraternity has furnished this necessary tie, and a continuous and progressive growth has been the result. The fraternity has now chapters in 32 colleges and universities from Harvard, Columbia, and Yale in the East to the universities of Washington and California in the West, and from the University of Minnesota in the North to the University of Texas and University of North Carolina in the South. tribution of money and greater purchasing power."

Approximately 70,000 men are employed in the Ford plants today, Mr. Ford stated, and these men are earning more than the 90,000 employed in the main manufacturing plants in the height of the Model T production. "It has been said," Mr. Ford commented, "that national business has suffered during the months when we were preparing to produce the new car. I do not believe it. It may be true that fewer cars were sold than would have been sold if our factory and sales organizations had been operating on a normal basis. According to persons believed to be familiar with the specifications of the Navy's new flying machine, it will combine many of the latest aeronautical developments. The sea-plane is of the biplane type, with the upper wing of the racing style which has proved successful on the Navy's fast two-seater airplanes. The lower wing tips up from the fuse-lage at a sharp angle, embodying features said to give an unusual compination of speed and stability

PROTAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU CHICAGO-A practical program for presenting the cultural achieve ments of the present day Negro has been worked out here for the first time by clubs and churches who cooperated for "Negro-in-art-week" and the program, it is said, is being adopted by cities in other sections of the United States.

This summary of the accomplish ment of the week was given by club women who staged it and by Dr. Alain Locke, a Negro author who participated. Exhibits of Negro art at the Chicago Art Institute, concerts of Negro music and readings by Negro poets were among the features. Louis J. Taber, master of the Na-tional Grange.
"Sentiment seems to be entirely back of the export debenture plan," Mr. Taber said. "I believe it will be indorsed over the McNary-Haugen bill. We need statesmanship rather than political workings in our efforts for farm relief. I think the export debenture plan will help to that end." Grange backing for the debenture plan will probably mean its formal introduction in the next session of Congress, Mr. Taber said, and, ac-cording to some officials, will end much McNary-Haugen strength in Washington was selected as the 1928 convention city of the National Grange by the delegates now in ses sion here. Date of the meeting was left to the national officers.

Consideration of resolutions occur pled attention during the next to the last day of the convention. Taxation, the Canadian wheat situation, federal supervision of farm market-ing, stricter enforcement of the prohibition laws, opposition to further encroachment of the Treasury Department in the conduct of the Federal Farm Loan Board and encouragement of members of the couragement of members of the Grange to aid or adopt Near East orphans were among resolutions pre-sented and considered during the day, Mr. Taber reported.

CLEVELAND, O. showing nineteenth and twentieth century specimens, amply showed the splendid fertility of design and color of the modern French manufacturers' productions.

The exhibition proved to have every right to the expression "the Art of Silk." It is an art and a very high one. It is a branch of applied art which one all too seldom thinks of in this way. Some of the pieces displayed were certainly as lovely as oil or water color paintings. Because a design is repeated, some may think it is to commercialize the figure beyond the limits of true art; but to visit this exhibition was to be disabused of any such opinion.

Exquisite Flewer Patterns Exquisite Flower Patterns

One hall in the Galliera Museum was devoted to old silks of the pre romantic and romantic periods of the first half of the last century. The house of Tassinari et Chatel loaned ity and others from the year 1817 to 1854. Even the titles expressed the poetry of these beautiful brocades. Take, for instance, this conpoetry of these beautiful brocades. Take, for instance, this one, which reads in French: "Brocart fond oreme, rosaces aves fleurs naturelles, pour fauteuila, 1833." Translated from that musical language, it means "brocade with cream background, having upon it rosettes of flowers, destined for armehairs." Exquisite flowers, like paintings on china, and as delicate. These silks often bore designs of flowers and gave the impression of leaving the flowers standing out from the brocades far more than do the central themes of modern patterns generally. A few of the more interesting designs in the modern section must be mentioned as perhaps specially em-mentioned as perhaps specially emphasizing the very high standard of trus art which the French are giving the world today with their silks. The Municipal Weaving School of Lyons submitted some examples of un-Flowered Ribbons, Pastel Tints

French establishment, M. Seguy had made a design of blue fish swimming through green waters—cool, quiet, colors. Of a different order were the ribbons of pastel shades of the firm of M. F. Calemard. The ribbons had small flowers printed on them and were both hovel and very artistic in character. Henry Bertraud showed a fine panel with dark hlue background and peacocks repeated. Each stood on a rose stem, the rose itself opening to the left. The effect was extremely rioh.

A pastel-shaded shawl of M. Algoud et Joannon, a Lyons house, attracted favorable attention for the intricacy of the geometrical designs GENEVA—A few years ago the scientific management of industry was regarded in Europe as a mysterious process, which might, like mass production, be suitable for the United States, but could not be grafted on the conservative methods of the old continent. But now there is hardly an industrialist in Europe who does not recognize the immense importance of adapting his business to the new ideas—known under the name of rationalization.

There is still an immense leeway to make up in Europe, but no one who studies the monly bulletin of the International Management Institute of Geneva can be in any doubt that a revolution in industrial methods is

Music in the Home May Range Widely in Variety and Interest

THE relation between music and home is a close one, and music as an essential of home life is a logical consideration. Lullables mark the first stages of the child's How much music shall I take my child to hear? To take the child to a reasonable number of concerts is advisable, but one should be sure that the music is well prepared for a logical consideration. Lullables musical interest, soon followed by the Mother Goose rhymes with advisable, but one should be sure that the music is well prepared for and well digested, and that the child is neither overstuffed nor underfed musically.

Regular Time for Its Enjoyment

In music, as in all other forms of family activity, it is almost pages and as a preparation for kinselves and as a preparation for kin-dergarten. Countless hours have been made enjoyable for one group of little ones, who became succes-sively bears, windmills, elephants or Jacks-in-boxes as the music guided their actions. 30 The form of music which I dignify onby the name of orchestral work calls Tor drums, tin covers and pans, po-tato mashers, big spoons, tambou-acrines, tooting horns, triangles, pieces of sandpaper—anything that can in-dicate rhythm and make a noise. Equipped with these instruments the children follow the beat of any strongly rhythmic piece played on the piano or phonograph. If the piano is being played it is well to evary the rhythm often and suddenly and to watch the surprising accuracy corry out the changed beat.

After this stage the child is ready ofor family singing. Singing is the staple of music in the home because it is the freest and most sponta-neous of all forms of musical expression. It also presents less technical difficulties for the child than learning some instrument, and par-ents are almost always able to sing even if they do not play. A practical library of vocal music for the home includes a good collection of folk songs of all nations, a hymn book of one's church, a collection of college songs including the old favorites, and one or two collections of the charming modern songs for children. While the new things written especially for children are often lovely, first importance must be given to the old established home songs which cannot make their impression too early on the child's consciousness. These are fundamental in the vocal knowledge of the child and that what I was hearing was a part of the child's experience. and form an early part of his musi-cal background. As the accompaniments to these songs are simple it is rare to find a household where there is not someone who can play for the singing. Part singing should be encouraged as soon as possible. As the part singing develops the scores of a few well-known light operas and grand operas are good things to acquire:

—the Gilbert and Sullivan works, notably "Pinafore" and "The Mi-De Koven's "Robin Hood," Victor Herbert's "The Red Mill," "Chimes of Normandy" and "I Trovatore.

The Piano as the Focus Turning from song to the piano as an element of a musical home, we find the plano the focus of all musi-cal activities of the household. Some knowledge of the plano should underlie all other branches of music, instrumental or vocal. Shall the musical mother assume the piano teaching of her own child?

As a rule it is better not, for two reasons—newer and better methods of child instruction are constantly coming into use and also teaching one's own child is a different proposition from teaching someone else's It would seem the best plan when pos sible is to get a good teacher for the young student and to let the mother, be she musical or unmusical, supplement the teacher's work by attending lessons and supervising the child's practice. Supervised practice, in the early stages at least, is a necessity ogress. The child should fur ther be shown in every way that plane work is not isolated or meaningless but useful and necessary to the musical atmosphere of the home. Offering to play duets with him as a reward for a good practice is a help-ful plan. There is nothing he enjoys more even though the duets be of the simplest. Encouraging him to play the accompaniments for the family saxophone, mandolin, banjo and uku-lele. As soon as possible the other instruments might accompany the plano in the family singing, and later they should do as much con-certed work together as they can.

dancing as a branch of musical life in the home may seem rather peculiar but it is practical. Of course, the interpretation is rather amusing but it sets free one of the primitive qualities of man—the bodily, rhythinic expression of music. Mothers who do not play could put a classical or semiclassical record on the phohograph, those who do play could get out their Chopin waltzes, their Mendelssohn's "Songs Without Words," their books of MacDowell and let the children express through individualized dancing their understanding of the emotional content of the music. This can be done with or without the aid of a piece of cheesecloth and an artificial flowers, but the dressing up adds to the realism. One is surprised by the natural grace of motion and pose and by the originality of interpretation evoked. Both boys and firs enjoy this until a comparatively advanced age.

Further to supplement the musical furies in the home, music history discriminating doses is delightful and interesting: a music magazine gives added impetus and other books, such as biographles and memoirs of phusicians plant their seeds of aspiration in the child thought. Informal gatherings of family and friends can in the home may seem rather pecul-iar but it is practical. Of course, the

to have a regular time for its per-formance as a household. The times directly after dinner in the evening and late on Sunday afternoons are found to be practical in some homes. Little neighborhood music clubs are valuable. Whenever the children have a party, group singing might be made a part of the program and whenever there is a Sunday evening gathering a few well-known hymns might be a part of the proceedings. Appreciation of music should be cultivated by calling the child's at-tention early and late to what is being played or sung in the home, with a simple analysis of the com-position's mood, meaning, and means of expression. A free expression of music at home goes a long way toward destroying self-consciousness in all parts of child life. Music, aside from its necessity as an educational and cultural agent, is of present-day young people, for active participation in music pro-vides an outlet for emotions which, unless taken care of through wise channels, run into unworthy and dangerous ones.

It is a truism to say that music is the universal language, but how often this fact is reimpressed upon us! An understanding of this language on the part of our young people hood of man. For example, there came to our house one day a plumber a young foreigner, to fix something down cellar. Soon there flowed up, along with the hammer taps, a song crude, deep and strange. Instead of meeting this with amusement or silent ridicule I realized that in for-

A PLAN for interesting the older scholars in rural pursuits through school work has been devised by the Hertfordshire County Council Education Committee. The committee believes that it is desirable to bring into rural schools work that will intelligently arouse counties. The locality that will intelligently arouse counties and industrial conditions, bistorical events in the locality, the that will intelligently arouse counthat will intelligently arouse country boys and girls to a genuine interest in their normal surroundings. In large towns the multitude of amusements, the crowded streets, the attractive shop windows, and the abundance of opportunities for social intercourse afford an education in themselves quite apart from that given in the schools. But, as the committee points out, the country-side is full of objects and happenings are least laterating but which a served as the served as that given in the schools. But, as the committee points out, the country-side is full of objects and happenings no less interesting, but which require a trained eye to see and a developed intelligence to interpret.

The committee takes the view that education in relation to the child's environment is a desirable end in it self, whether children remain in the country or not; and that it is all to the good if children from the counciation and understanding of rural learning is still in the experimental stage, Dean Jones cites. On the basis of the information available on the junior college, he says:

"Most of the junior colleges are too small for effective work. A high school that graduates not more than 100 students annually should not establish a junior college.

"The increase in the cost of operation, the public junior colleges is considerably shorter than in the college or university. Only by continuity of the faculty can any college hope to develop the peculiar spirit that has in the past been associated with the best of the liberal colleges.

Gardening and Visits Gardening is made to include, besides the usual work, fruit culture and correlation with the keeping of livestock (bees, poultry, rabbits, etc.) An important innovation in the cheme is that which provides for clation and understanding of rural conditions.

The committee is aware of the good work already being done in some rural schools, particularly in the subjects of gardening and rural sclence. It is now desired, however, to make experiments in a fresh direction. It is therefore proposed to encourage organized visits during school hours to local farms and other places where rural industries are carried on.

Choosing Books for Our Children Chairmand. The most practical supervising a parent can do is to place within the child's reach good books, leaving their comely bindings and good print to woo and win him. On Choosing Books

Because books express thoughts and ideas, and thoughts and ideas make up the sum total of living, the choice of books, especially those to be placed in the hands of our chil-

The need of supervising a child's reading is certainly not a new one, but that the need is greater today than ever before results from the vasily greater amount of printed material that is being turned out. The time to begin the forming of a taste for good literature in a child, is long before the child has learned to read for himself. Here is where ross-section view of all clubs in the report of her district. She says:

The clubs of the fifth district are to varied and versatile, with such a wide range of endeavor and achievement it is a real problem to select the best things to report. All have wrought well, some have excelled others, while a few seem to have led all the rest. An interesting panoman it would be if it were possible to pass in review the 60-odd clubs of the district as they have worked out their conception of a woman's club. There would be the large clubs, those with far-reaching contacts and wide vision, operating through various departments, touching here and there the great currents of thought and stepping into the rushing maeistrom of daily events as it flows through channels now deep, now shallow. Here the original culture club with its select membership who lunch with Flutarch and sup with Plato, then pluck the stars from high heaven's domain and weave them into a coronet for Socrates. Comes tripping by the "compasse" type—light study, heavy trimmings of social activities and here and there a touch of productiveness. Now here is a variety that invites attention—'Creative writers' stamps this as clever and different. They grow fledglings, warblers and real song birds in the old home nest, and in the course of time some evolute into writers of genuine fame.

Through the fine way in which every request made of the federation has been granted, there now exists in Alabama a co-operative plan of work between the State Council of Home Demonstration Clubs and the State Federation State Council of Home Demonstration Clubs and the State Federation of Women's Clubs, which is bringing about a real understanding between town and country women.

As a result of an amendment to the by-laws of the State Federation, county councils of home demonstration clubs can now federate. Twelve county councils and 31 individual home demonstration clubs are now federated. Because of the gratitude of the extension services rendered, an edition of the report number of the Digest was prepared and sent to the presidents of the clubs.

At a immer yard 2 turped pieces, anch as are generally used for stair bajusters, were bought; a carpenter mide a frame te support the chest of drawers, and by cutting the 2 bajusters in half, 4 legs were made for this frame. The chest and supporting frame were then given 2 coats of black lacquer, with the exception of the oval panels on the drawers, which were done in one thick coat of Chinese red, almost an orange. To lacquer these panels so that the lacquer would lie thickly enough to level itself, thereby covering any scars left from removing the numbers, the chest was turned over on its back. A bronze metallic paint was then stippled on the panels in an irregular blotchy way, showing the red and bronze about equally. The scroll design which is usually found on the drawers around the knobs was high-lighted with the metallic paint; the knobs were screwed in place and bronzed.

It is difficult adequately to nicture the result of this small amount of work. The model has been called everything from an helrloom to a Chinese chest, or a music cabinet, or for any one of a dozen purposes.

Handmade Baskets of Crepe Paper

The square box is equally convenient for a desk accessory or for holding the many odds and ends that accumulate on a dressing table. About Materials

The same process of weaving is involved in both of them. That is, an uneven number of wires must be provided over which to weave. The covered, with a wrapping of crepe the paper used for the weaving, and the paper used for the weaving, and inch-wide strips of crèpe paper for weavers. One needs also for the work a bit of spool wire with which to fasten the wires together, and a pair of long-nosed pliers for cutting and bending the wires.

The oval basket should be 14 inches long. That means that a backbone of crossed wires for the center of the bottom and a similar one for the lid, each 7 inches long, are needed.

The finished basket should be 14 inches long, 7 inches wide and 2 inches high. This means that to work with convenience the lengthwise wires should be 22 inches long. Four of these 22-inch wires are required, and 14 wires about 15 inches long for the crosswise direction. All of the wires should be wrapped with a half-inch strip of crepe paper before anything else is done. A touch of glue will hold the paper at each end of each wire.

Forming the Oval Basket Lay the 4 lengthwise wires side by side and with a bit of the spool wire bind them together by weaving over and under each to form two V's. Measure off 7 inches in the center of this group of wires, and lay 3 of the 15-inch wires across the group. With a strip of the crêpe paper 1-inch wide wrap with an X these 3 cross wires fast to the 4 long wires. Then wrap the weaver 3 times around the long wires, each wrapping being placed on top of the maining 2 strands over this wire. Cut the other. Lay a single 15-inch wire them off and glue them neatly to the in salted water, was equally successinalf an inch from the group of 3 inside edge, concealing the ends in petizing novelty in the way of a half an inch from the group of 3 cross wires, and wrap it on with an X made of the weaver. Add 8 of these single wires, one every half inch, and then 3 in a group at the end of the 7 inches measured off for the backbone of the basket.

Lay the backbone flat on a table, and separate the lengthwise wires into groups of two, all but one of the groups of 5 crosswires at each end

B ASKETS and boxes of all wates weaving until the sides are 1% inches far such popular commodities that there is always a demand for those that craft workers can make. In response to that demand were devised these two boxes woven of strips of crope paper. The long oval one is for table silver, and is so made that the lid and bottom form two trays, which add to the neatness and convenience of the sideboard drawer.

The square box is ornamented with a glued-on beading of crope paper. To make this, the inch-wide strip is twisted between the thumb and forefunger of each hand so that the thumb imprints are left in the paper. Then he twisted strip is glued on for ornamentation. N THE Old Testament we read of who did this same spiritual healing great man, and who, because of his deeds of valor, was nearest to the person of the king. Though Naaman had won battles and, in the order of things in those days, had appropriated captives and, no doubt, spoils for himself, yet Naaman himself was in bondage to an affliction that so far had defled cure: he was a leper.

In the course of events one of those great deeds occurred that often have their origin in humble acts. A little Israelitish maiden who had one Naaman, a Syrian, who was a work; and then, for a time, material-

Jesus said, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." To some, these words may seem remote and impractical; but in the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," Mrs. Eddy has written (pp. 12, 13), "In divine Science, where prayers are mental, all may avail themselves of God as 'a very present help in trouble." This healing is for all, not merely for those who may be of a certain nationality, or for those who may have a certain type of disease or a certain kind of problem; but "whosoever" will gain the understanding of and obey divine Principle, Love, may be healed. The little serving maid did not doubt that the Syrian, a man of wholly different nationality, religion, customs, habits, and experiences from herself could be healed. Should any of us, then, fear or doubt the words of the Master? Rather should we, in full confidence, seek the understanding of ever present healing Truth.

Most startling of the surprises found in the Thanksgiving day football game was the slashing 30-to-0 triumph of University of Pittsburgh over Pennsylvania State College. The havoc wrought by Capt. G. L. While the Panthers rose to share the eastern pinnacle with Yale, the hitherto unbeaten New York University eleven, in an intersectional classic, went down by 27 to 18 before the University of Nebraska, and Washington and Jefferson, also unbeaten, lost caste by a 6-to-6 tie with West Virginia University.

Yale, the team which must be rated in the same high class with Pittsburgh, has finished its season, basing its title claim upon a clean sweep of its eastern games with its only defeat an early season loss to Georgia. The Caorgia Buildogs, unbeaten, continued Georgia Bulldogs, unbeaten, continued their march through the South by trimming Alabama yesterday, 20 to 6. trimming Alabama yesterday, 20 to 6.
Almost as startling as the worst beating Pittsburgh ever has given Penn State, was the 35 to 0 white-washing handed Cornell University by its old rival, Pennsylvania. Gridiron history also was made at the Polo grounds where Columbia University defeated Syracuse University 14 to 7, for the first time since they started, laying football together in 1901. When Brown and Colgate University fought to a scoreless tie, they established something of a record in that their last three meetings have produced no decision games.

Among the small college results of note was a 46 to 0 victory over Dicknison for Bucknell, a 33 to 7 defeat for Rochester at the hands of one of the best Hobart teams on regord, and a 24 to 0 victory over Vermont for Springfield Y, M. C. A. College, which registered an unbeaten season.

RADIOCASTING of football

Ahearn said today it was his opinion that radiocasting was largely responsible for small crowds at home games in which the

"I believe broadcasting of games has burt attendance generally," Mr. Abearn said. "When there was a threat of rain and the possibility of muddy roads, people stayed at home, saved their money and heard nome, saved their money and heard the game reports over the radio. If radio reports could be abut off within a radius of 100 miles and then broadcast beyond that, I den' think attendance would be harmed. But, of course, that is ffispossible. Careful consideration was given to the question as to whether the United States should challenge in the American for European sone. Herestofore that phase has never arisen as the establishmen of the two-zone system of play took place after the United States when the cup from Australia in 1920. In the role of cup defender, no prepare the play was necessary. Now Prance occupies this position.

Several factors entered into the conclusions of the Davis Cup committee. If the team was to play in the European zone, it probably would require sending players abroad the level of the leading teams in the state of the players abroad the interest of the players will be presented to begin about May I and a reasonable training period on the other side would be necessary. OTTAWA TAKES LEAD IN DIVISION

Maroons Defeat Chicago 2 to 0-Maple Leafs Score Win Over Americans

NATIONAL HOCKEY LEAGUE

CHICAGO—in the opening game of the National Hockey League season here Wednesday the Ottawa Senators defeated the Chicago Blackhawks, 2 to 0, and took the lead of the Canadian division standing. More than 8000, the largest hockey crowd on record in this city, turned out for the event at the Coliseum.

After two scoreless periods, Ottawa rallied in the final to make both goals. Denneny, wing, scored first on a pass from Nighor, center, in 14m. 44s. Finnigan, wing, scored the other with the help of Boucher, defense, in 4m. 10s.

The Blackhawks carried the attack in the first two periods, but the Ottawa goaltending and defense balked all attempts to score. In the final period the Hawks sent four men down the fee in desperate offensives, thus leaving their own goal poorly defended against the second successful shot of the visitors.

For the locals, McKay, center, and Rodden, wing, played brilliantly. The summary:

Special From Monitor Burnay

NEW YORK, Nov. 25—The Toronto Maple Leafs made their first appearance of the season here yesterday and scored a 2-to-1 victory over the New York Americans, thus keeping the locals in last place in the Canadian section of the National Hockey League, without a single victory to their credit.

The visitors had a completely interchangeable forward line, and switched from one position to another at short intervals. Their star, however, was Day, now on the defense, who was able to get inside the forward line with ease, and frequently had only diller to stop his rush. He scored only once, however.

The Maple Leafs started right from the face off to settle the game. Day took the puck down four times in succession, and on the fourth attack a shot from the blue line bounced off Miller's pads and slid, into the net.
One of the new penalties, a major, was charged against McCaffrey for loafing behind his own blue line, and talking back to the referee.

The second period was even, with the Americans showing improvement over any of their recent performances.
Barry, the new center spare of the locals, after a number of tries by his teanmates had been spoiled by the fine defense of Day and Roach, got through and scored. But just at the end of the period Bailey got through the defense play by the visitors, and only an occasional dash by Day varied their town. Sasbright, and Longwood, are planned by the Crescent Athletic Club at its Bay Ridge country home in Brooklyn, next year. An appropriation has been made to that end and a new super-intendent of grounds engaged to supervise the reconstruction. The new overseer is an expert on all forms of playing fields. The entire lower grass field is being resseded, fertilized and graded Germantown, Longwood and Seabright at present possess the ranking turf courts of the country and the Crescent Club expects to take a prominent place among them in the next year. The turf will be brand new, billiard table smoothness for the 1928 season. PHILADELPHIA UNBEATEN

RYE. N. Y. Nov. 25—The Philacelphia first and second teams remained this morning as the only undefeated ones which are competing in the women's intercity field hockey championship tournament on the grounds of the West-chester-Biltmore Country Club here. Three games were played Wednesday and three yesterday. The Philadelphia first team has victories of 10 to 9 over Boston and 9 to 0 over Pairchester, while the second team of that city has a 2-to-2 victory over Baltimore and a 8-to-2 victory over Baltimore and a 8-to-2 victory over New York. In the two other games played Baltimore defeated Boston 2 to 1 and Fairchester defeated New York 7 to 1.

world's chess championship, on Wednesday won his fifth victory over Jose R. Capablanca, the present champion, after 63 moves. One more victory and Alekhine, youthful Russian master, will have wrested the championship from the Cuban chess star.

Resuming the game adjourned Tuesday after 40 moves, Alekhine did the "unexpected" for, after having the advantage of one pawn, all major pieces having been previously exchanged, he sacrificed two of his white pawns, giving Capablanca a gain of a pawn, but in this way he clinched his fifth victory. As the Russian was about to crown one of his two remaining pawns as a queen, Capablanca resigned. At the end there remained on the board only two white pawns and three black ones.

Taberski Defends His World Title

Defeats Natalie, 450 to 171, in 119 Innings at Pocket Billiards

CHICAGO, Nov. 25—Working like a banker figuring interest, relentlessly calculating. Frank Taberski of Schenectady, N. Y., completed his defense of the world's championship at pocket billiards against Pasquale Natalie of Baltimore, Md., challenger at Mussey's Amphitheater here. The final score was Taberski 450, Natalie 171 in 119 innings. To the last inning the champion never gave the challenger a chance, and the latter consistently blundered at every opportunity. Natalie was never himself during the three 150-point blocks, nor did Taberski play championship billiards.

Taberski goes back to his home town with checks for $1200, representing the purse of $700 and the stake of $500. He wanted also to take back the beautiful set of balls especially made for the match, which he declared to be the best he ever played with. This request, however, was denied, as the balls are to be preserved for future championship matches.

with much humidity, the cloth absorbed some of the moisture and slowed up more to the taste of the champion. This final block fell to Taberski, 150 to 25 in 28 innings, the most one-sided game of the three. The champion shot more rapidly and the same to the series. Natalie seemed to have a great load on his shoulders. An Italian politician here put up the purse in order to bring the match to this city, and Natalie's countrymen turned out in numbers to support him. In previous contests with Taberski in league play and special matches. Natalie had built up a margin over the New York Stater and was therefore considered a favorite. Hav-

Former M. I. T. Student and Foils Champion Meets With Good Success

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BURNAU

NEW YORK, Nov. 25—Joseph L.
Levis of the New York Fencers Club, scored the initial success of the fencing season of the Amateur Fencers League of America, on Wednesday evening, when he defeated a field of 19 competitors in the prep saber contest at the New York Athletic Club, for a prize offered by Dr. Graeme M.
Hammond, president of the American Olympic Association, and a former president of the A. F. L. A.

The young fencer, who was intercollegiate folis champion two years ago, while a student at Massachusetta Institute of Technology, made the transition to the new weapon with good success, losing only one bout, and displaying fair technique for a first attempt. F. H. Riebel of Ohio State University, on a visit to New York over the holiday, was the only one to defeat him, 4 to 2, and this result was reversed in the finals, when Levis defeated him in turn, 4 to 1.

The new requirement, which provides that entries must be made in writing a day in advance, proved highly successful, so that the competition, instead of stretching into the morning hours as in past years, was concluded by the middle of the eve-

If that were all, there were small cause for a book or for lamentations." Obviously, it is not only imperialism, but the industrialism which gave rise to it, which Mr. Peffer intends to attack.

Style Racy

The attack, we are told, is not to be on grounds of morality. "The moral aspects of imperialism will be gnored in this book. Whether it is right or wrong will be taken as a question apart and extraneous to the issue." Yet the author finds it impossible to abide by this decision. Throughout the 16 chapters, it is only too apparant that he considers the imperialistic program not only inwise, but morally indefensible.

Mr. Pfeffer's style is racy, his expressions are pungent, and he draws apon a wide range of information to the course of a journalistic career in both the Near East and the Far East. He is both clever

The Economic Motive

In examining the cause of important. It is in his view the need to markets and for raw materials, and the tendency of accumulated capital to find new outlets, which have led the white race to overrun the world. Overpopulation has had little to do with this movement. Military strategy has played some part in it, as has also a somewhat artificial concept of mational honor, but more important than either of these has been the humanitarian motive, and the eagerness to assume what is alled rightly or wrongly, "the white man's burden."

Nevertheless prejudice, did not keep the public away from his readings. They were the social and literary eyents of the winter. MOVEMENT OF STOCK PRICES NOT UNIFORM

Considerable Irregularity Is Noted-Motor Issues Are Active

NEW YORK, Nov. 25 (P)—Resumption of the upward price movement in today's stock market was again attended with some irregularity.

Powerful financial pools were again active in a wide assortment of public utility, merchandising, chemical, motor and shipping shares, early gains running from 1 to 8 points.

Bear traders continued to seek out weak spots, but they failed to make much headway. Otis Steel prior preferred, which soored a sensational gain of more than 20 points last week, lost nearly half its gain, and Adams Express crumbled 7 points, but the early losses in other targets of short sellers were held to a point or two.

Commodity markets were mixed, cotton advancing about 75 cents to 31 a bale, while meat prices turned reactionary. Sterling exchange advanced to 2 new high sevel since 1914.

New peak prices for the year, or longer, were registered in the stock market by nearly a score issues, including Brooklyn Edison, Detroit Edison, Congoleum, International Paper, Bloomingdale Bros., Corn Products common and preferred and Vanadium Steel.

U. S. Steel common and General common and preferred and Vanadium Steel.

U. S. Steel common and General Motors were again under pressure, selling off about 2 points in the early trading, but recovering half of their losses by carly afternoon.

Rails were inclined to heaviness, although a fair demand developed for some of the coalers after midday.

The closing was firm. A number of low-priced stocks such as St. Paul preferred, Intercontinental Rubber, Conde Nast and Advance Rumely preferred, joined the rise in investment railroads in the final hour. Canadian Pacific and Norfolk & Western sold above 200 again, and Northern Pacific reached par for the first time in nearly a decade. Radio Corporation and National Biscuit reached the year's highs. Total sales approximated 2,300,000 shares.

A.87 2-16.

Prices were steady as trading was esumed in the bond market today following the holiday recess. Transctions were in comparatively small olume, probably because of the absence of some traders over the week-sence of some traders over the weekend.

A few industrial liens continued to move toward higher ground, especially Goodyear 5s, Qtis Steel '6s and Chile Copper 5s. Bome of the St. Paul issues continued to improve fractionally.
American Water Works 5s were in fair demand, but the 6s were easy.
Some of the German securities, such as Saxon Public Works and Bavarian 6½s, displayed strength, but the external loan 7s were again under pressure. Peruvian 7s fell back from their peak price as profit-taking developed.
Federal Government bonds were firm, but there was little increase in business.

Among the Railroads

By FRANKLIN SNOW

ONSTOP runs over long dis tances are coming to be regarded as the determining factor of passenger locomotive efficiency, in which both the builders and the railroad transportation officers take equal pride. In the United States, the Southern Pacific Company claims the record for the longest nonstop run. It operates between San Francisco and Los Angeles vi the "Shore Line." 471 miles without a scheduled passenger stop. The time is 12 hours. There are two operat-ing stops, however, for fuel and water.

Generally speaking. British railways lead the world in this respect. The Cornish Riviera Express makes the 226-mile run between London and Plymouth on the Great Western Railway without a stop, the runing time. Plymouth on the Great Western Railway without a stop, the running time being four hours flat. For the first 174 miles, the scheduled time is 175 minutes and the maintaining of a speed of approximately 60 miles an hour for four hours is without parallel in the world, it is believed. The King George V engine is one of the new locomotives in England which is making this run, this engine having been displayed in the grant without the making the property of the first parallel which is making the first parallel in the Baltimore & United States at the Baltimore & gine having been displayed in the United States at the Baltimore & Chio's Fair of the Iron Horse. While British trains are much lighter, and relatively few long or heavy grades are encountered, the performance every day is none the less remarkable.

Track Maintenance

To operate fast trains with few stops, the track must be in excellent condition. Even the elevation of the condition. Even the elevation of the outer rail on curves is of prime importance. The Interstate Commerce Commission, in investigating the derailment of the Broadway Limited on the Pennsylvania Railroad, in the mountains of western Pennsylvania, pointed out that the elevation of the succession of the contract of the succession of the of the outer rail was insufficient, the combination of an 8%-degree curve and a track elevation of four inches being held to be too small a margin of safety for fast running, accord-ing to the Railway Age.

The track also was said to be out of gauge. A maximum speed of 20 miles an hour on this 2 per cent descending grade was recommended, and this investigation, and the facts ascertained, denote the precautions which must be taken in the opera-tion of fast trains with infrequent so lar as North American railways are concerned, and in the construction, furnishing and operation of their hostelries, both the Canadian National and the Canadian Pacific Railways have established marks which many independent hotels have not attained.

New Boston Station

"You can't judge a town by the station," is a maxim which many travelers have recognized in the past, yet an attractive entrance to a city creates a favorable impression upon railway passengers. Therefore, the plan of the Boston & Maine Railroad to create a new North Station at Boston places the city of Boston in the category of most large cities which have, in the past decade or more, benefited by new and imposing railroad stations.

Of the larger cities, New York; Philadelphia, Washington, Jackson-ville, Richmond, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, St. Paul, Kansas City, Den-ver and Salt Lake are among those in which new terminals either have been built or are under construc-tion. Impressive rail terminals are costly and it is not always that they earn a compensatory return upon the investment, yet they stand as a monument to the company which erects them and to the city which they serve.

Like Atchison, Southern Railway has pursued a conservative policy is since its reorganization in 1895, a total of more than $100,000,000 having been put into the property out of earnings alone since that time As a result, Southern is reaching a standard of excellence which is reflected in its earning power, and its stock has recently risen to a new high of 141.

Southern has taken a notable lead in the installation of automatic train control, going far beyond the L. C. C's requirements in this respect. With new cars and more powerful locomotives, Southern Railway is increasing its train load, is moving trains at faster speed, and the growing diversification of products in the South is giving it a more constant volume of traffic.

Ours Is "Everybody's Christmas Store"

Our store is ready now for in-vasion by seekers after gifts, usual and unusual, little-priced and extravagant!

For weeks our buyers have been busy gathering merchan-dise of the sort that makes satisfying gifts. For weeks we have been trimming our store to make it Christmas-beautiful and its atmosphere inviting to the holiday shopper.

We have christened our store "Everybody's Christmas Store" because we feel sure that every-one—no matter who they are— will find here gifts they can call "perfection itself."

Constitution-Making for India

THE work of making a new political constitution for the people of India has begun. The British Government has appointed a parliamentary commission under a distinguished Liberal, Sir John Simon, which is expected to take two years gathering information and working out a scheme in accordance, as far as possible, with the wishes of the people of India. The task is exceedingly difficult because India is a continent containing almost as many nationalities and languages as the whole of Europe, and with such acute religious, caste, and race antagonisms as to render almost all generalization unsound.

If the peoples whose political future is to be determined were confined to the 2,000,000 voters who elect representatives to the Central and Provincial legislative assemblies in Delhi, Calcutta, Bombay, Madras, and other centers, the case would be different. The majorities on these bodies have pronounced very definitely in favor of autonomy. They would oust the white man from control and put the Indian in his place. India would be given complete autonomy such as exists already in Canada, Australia, South Africa, and Southern Ireland. When the case of the 218,000,000 who do not vote for the election of members of the Legislative Councils is considered, however, complications at once arise. India is rightly described in the report of a commission which investigated the situation eight years ago, as "marching through the centuries from the fifth to the twentieth.

The welfare of masses of illiterate and unrepresented cultivators has to be taken into account. Europeans cannot be ignored, for it is they who have built up law and order, who have made for all-round safety, who have established the great industries of India, who have constructed its railways and irrigated its deserts, and who conduct the major portion of its external trade. Parsis (Persian immigrants) who manage cotton mills in western India and run successful newspapers in Bombay are also entitled to be heard. Indian princes who rule semiautocratically governed states containing 72,000,000 people are vitally affected. Racial and religious differences have to be understood and bridges formed across them. The non-Brahmanical races are at variance with their more dominant fellows.

There is friction so sharp between 70,000,000 Indians who are Muhammadans and the 216,-000,000 who are Hindus, as to have caused widespread rioting. So serious is this aspect of the case that Syed Ameer Ali, ex-president of the faculty of law in the Calcutta University, describes it as "the real problem which the Royal Commission will have to solve." Ameer Ali adds, "The larger community [Hindu] has by its numbers obtained the practical administration of the country; the other [Muhammadan] is apprehensive of losing every political right in the growth of nationalism among its rivals." The question then to be solved is how to satisfy the legitimate political aspirations other important communities. A preliminary objection has been taken to the absence of Indians from the investigating commission. This, however, is not likely to be pressed, since party feeling prevails so strongly in all circles in India that it is only by excluding everyone-whether Indian or British-who has lived there and thus become committed to the interests of any particular class, that a verdict with any prospect of acceptance as impartial can be expected. This accounts for Mr. Baldwin's claim that the method chosen is "to give the real, responsible, instructed opinion of Indians the best chance of taking a constructive part in devising a solution."

On Aug. 20, 1917, the British Government solemnly promised "The increasing association of Indians in every branch of the administration, and the gradual development of self-governing institutions, with a view to the gradual realization of responsible government in India as an integral part of the British Empire." For eight years partial self-government has been in operation as a step toward this ideal. The investigation now starting is with a view to a further move in a similar direction, and the British Government is well advised to omit no precaution to avoid mistakes. The commission represents all political parties in the British Parliament which is responsible for the launching of the scheme. It is to consult Indian public opinion of every kind. When it has done so it is to submit proposals to be considered in every legislature in India, before the British Government is committed to any particular scheme of advance. The future of India hangs upon the

Breaking New Ground in Education

NE of the most encouraging indications of national well-being in England and Wales is the growth of adult education. A remarkable increase in the number of adult classes and in the number of students attending them has taken place since the war. All sections of the community are concerned in the movement, but it more particularly benefits the manual workers and the men and women who left school at an early age.

The recent report of the adult education committee of the board of education shows how the various voluntary agencies have been stimulated in their work by financial aid from the Government and the local education authorities. Needless to say, voluntaryism is an absolute necessity in a movement such as this; and the disadvantage of a government grant is the possibility that it may destroy the sense of spontaneity in an atmosphere of bureaucratic control. Happily, no such result has followed the special type of grant which adult education has received. The Men's Institutes in London have been able to extend their combination of club activities and intellectual improvement. The Women's Institutes in the provinces have developed their home crafts and domestic interests, the Y. M. C. A. has enlarged its activities without sacrificing its religious basis, and other organizations, in particular the Workers' Educational Association, have greatly increased the number and range of the courses they provide. Variety is the most valuable, as it is the most characteristic feature of the movement. Practically every kind of intellectual and artistic activity is encouraged. On the one hand are classes of advanced students studying the higher branches of natural science under the skilled tuition of university graduates. On the other hand are village "adult schools" discussing economic and social affairs under the leadership of one of their own members—"going into com-mittee on public questions," as it has been styled. Literature, dramatic work, folk dancing and other commercial interests are included in the beneficial activities of the adult education. The movement calls forth much voluntary service on the part of its leaders, it confers great advantages on its members, and it yields to the Nation a return in intelligence, in character and in citizenship out of all proportion to the com-paratively small subsidy which it receives.

AS THE time approaches for the convening of Congress there are indications of a relaxation in the insistence of some members of the farm bloc upon the plan, previously outlined, of re-enacting, virtually in its original form, the much-discussed McNary-Haugen farm relief bill. It seems to have been made convincingly apparent that the more conservative senators and representatives from the western and southern sections of the United States, some of whom appear to have voted for the measure at the last session partly, at least, because they desired to place upon President Coolidge the responsibility of vetoing it if he had the courage to do so, have discovered that their action did not strengthen them with their constituencies. Many of these have declined to enter again into any such unprofitable alliance.

And so it has developed, judging from present indications, that while it might be barely possible to re-enact the equalization fee section of the bill at the coming session, it is a foregone conclusion that by no conceivable combination of voting strength, either in the Senate or House, could the bill be passed over the President's veto. It is inevitable that the measure, if again passed, would fail to receive the approval of Mr. Coolidge. It is because this situation has arisen that negotiations which may lead to a satisfactory compromise are being continued in Washington. The Administration is squarely on record as favoring some method of price stabilization made possible by government aid to organized co-operative marketing of the crop surplus, the beneficiaries being the producers of all staple commodities. It may be a reasonable supposition that no one seriously doubts the soundness of such a plan. Because of this, the position of the proponents of the equalization fee method is becoming less and less tenable.

It is unfortunate that some of the western members of both houses of Congress feel themselves to be bound to deliver the McNary-Haugen bill in the form of law. Not a few of these were elected upon this issue, which, by the way, was one of their own making. Aided and encouraged by the Farm Bureau Federation organizers, they convinced the farmer voters that nothing less than this particular remedy would restore prosperity to the agricultural states. The contrary has already been proved, but the pledge of performance is at least theoretically binding. Insinuations are heard that the issue is to be fought out on the line indicated, and that it is the intention of the more radical farm bloc leaders to carry the contest over into the presidential campaign next year. It would be fortunate, in the meantime, if millions of farmers in Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, the Dakotas and Minnesota could be given the opportunity to absolve their friends from the obligation which was imposed under a misapprehension, that they might enter upon an acceptable compromise plan without unnecessary delay.

Inheritance Taxes

7HILE recommending a new United States revenue bill whittling taxes some $235,-000,000, the House Ways and Means Committee also favored the retention of the federal estate or inheritance tax, a decision which marks an important step toward solving, but does not settle, this tax problem. Whether Congress accepts the seventeen-to-six vote of the committee that the present law shall stand and that the United States Government shall continue to collect the estate levy, or whether it concludes that the individual states shall exercise this right, is of unusual concern.

Andrew W. Mellon, United States Secretary of the Treasury, has recommended that the law be repealed, and he is supported by a number of bankers, business organizations, state legislators and individuals, who claim among other things that the law is an invasion of state rights, effects multiple taxation, yields little revenue, is a nuisance and has outlived its necessity as a war measure. Advocates of the repeal of this law started work several years ago and succeeded in having the maximum tax reduced from 40 per cent to 20 per cent on $10,000,000. A number of leaders in Congress, however, are just as strong for the retention of the law, claiming that estates represent a source of revenue well able to contribute to the expense of the government. Still another group, while believing that the inheritance tax is a state right, does not think that the federal inheritance tax should be relinquished until the states have taken over its obligations. Not whether estates can pay, however, but whether they will pay, seems to be the germane point about which little is said. In this instance it is claimed that if the levying of inheritance taxes is left to the states, much money that should be collected will escape, while Florida, Nevada, Alabama and the District of Columbia, having no such taxes, will increase their millionaire populations.

In this connection an experience in Massachusetts is pointed to as somewhat comparable and perhaps enlightening. At one time in Massachusetts intangible property was taxed at the local rate of the town in which a man held residence. As a result a number of wealthy men took up residence by spending one night in such small country towns as Orleans, where the rate was about $8 a thousand, and thus escaped pay-ing the higher rate of the city where they lived the balance of the year. To remedy this condition Massachusetts revised the law, making the rate on intangibles uniform throughout the State, and then collected and distributed the revenue proportionately.

To a degree the Federal Government aimed to do a similar thing in allowing each state up to 80 per cent of the inheritance tax collected. The debate on this momentous question will be of value in so far as it will contribute further light on the too little understood tax questior.s.

Youth and Prohibition

PERSIAN youth, Hessameddin Shafa, studying at Wooster College, Wooster, O., in his international liquor contest essay challenged the youth of the world, and particularly the young people of America, to go forward boldly and without compromise in the campaign for national and international sobriety. He said:

America is the laboratory in which the success or failure of prohibition must be worked out. We cannot believe that America will turn back. Once having lighted the torch, she will bear it aloft. And other nations will come and receive fire from it, so that in time to come the whole world shall be lighted. The task is not yet done. There are many hard battles to be fought. Therefore, I appeal to the younger generation, to the youth of the United States and of the world, reminding them that their actions shall to a large degree determine the destiny of the

What the young Mr. Shafa says is eminently true. We are in the midst of a great forward movement to make the world sober. Age standing alone cannot succeed in this gigantic undertaking. Such a reform cannot be accomplished in a day. The younger generation must be intrusted with the responsibility of completing the task begun by their fathers. Youth must make the world safe for law and order. It becomes daily more evident that the youth upon whom the future depends may be expected to measure up to their high duty in this important regard. At the recent Winona Lake congress of the World League Against Alcoholism there was launched a youth movement in behalf of prohibition. Representatives of the youth groups of many races and nations participated in the plans for that congress and may now be counted on to push forward toward the high goal that was there set forth. The Intercollegiate Prohibition Association, with its chapters in many lands, is encouraging the youth of the world, not by inflamed propaganda but by a thorough study of the liquor problem, to co-operate with their elders in the gradual achievement of universal prohibition.

During the past summer many pronouncements have come from conventions and conferences of youth indicative of a like purpose. The International Christian Endeavor convention that met in Cleveland last July enthusiastically adopted a prohibition plank in their platform for a moral world order. This organization is representative of no less that 400,000 of the world's youth. Similarly, at Philadelphia, the Baptist Young People's Conference of North America pledged the thousands of the youths constituent to that international organization to labor in behalf of constitutional prohibition. The Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. in their approach to the young people of the colleges in America declare for the sanctity of the Eighteenth Amendment, calling upon their many members to respect the law and to adhere to it. Organizations such as the Girl Reserves and the Hi-Y Clubs are continually emphasizing the gospel of prohibition.

At the 1927 annual meeting of the Citizens' Committee of One Thousand it was voted to proceed with the formation of a youth commission to prepare and issue a document that would enable the young people of America more clearly to understand the meaning of the Eighteenth Amendment and to stimulate a sense of loyalty to that fundamental law. That commission, after an exhaustive study, is about ready to make its report. It is intended that the recent publication, "Prohibition in Outline," will be used by this youth commission as a basis for study among discussion groups. And so it goes Youth is making its voice articulate on this important issue. The prohibition law of the land will stand. It will stand because the young people, in the main, are responsive to the high standards of social idealism inherent in that particular piece of legislation. Furthermore, the international aspects of this problem will be handled in an able fashion by the more forwardlooking youth groups of other nations. It is the very genius of youth to devote its energy for the strengthening of those forces that make for social progress. That is why youth may be regarded as being for and not against the prohibition cause.

Editorial Notes

An American educator returned from a lecture tour in Mexico reports that the southern republic is establishing one-teacher country schools at the rate of 1000 a year and expects soon to reach 6000. Mexico has not failed, apparently, to heed the success of the United States, whose educational system was based on the "little red schoolhouse," as the district school was called.

Carnac: The Oldest Temples in Europe

WITH the center of Carnac, in Brittany, liberally plastered with notices such as "Aux Alignements du Menec; 800 m," or "Alignements de Kermario; 1 km 800," it was undeniably disappointing that on our first after-dinner stroll there, we should see nothing which was noticeably prehistoric.

The next day we again plodded up the tumulus and, facing northward, we discovered them in three groups. They did not seem very far away, yet they looked very insignificant, and even when we arrived there, our disappointment was not fully redeemed. We had made for the most easterly group, forcing our way under a broiling sun through the tangle of thorns and gorse, until, breasting a slight slope, we emerged from a small wood into the middle of a group.

They had appeared vaguely impressive through the trees silhouetted against the sky, but now that we were actually here, they did not come up to expectations. Amid a labyrinth of gray stone grown with greenish lichen and carpeted with purple heather, and no settled direction in which to wander, we veered to our right to avoid a char-à bancs. The stones stretched out in front of us in regular lines, climbing up a gentle hill, toward which we walked But the farther we walked, the smaller grew the stones till from being about ten or twelve feet high they only came to our waist, while eventually they hardly reached

We were further disappointed to find in the very mid-dle of them a farmhouse with chickens and goats straying at will along the sacred lines. Our romantic imagining received the final blow when some cows driven home by a black-smocked girl with a large yellow straw hat tied under her chin, nonchalantly stopped and rubbed their backs against the largest stone. However, our waning interest was revived when on reaching the crest of the hill which we had thought the end of the lines, we saw that they stretched for nearly as far again as we had come with one superb giant guarding the rest.

In the afternoon we visited the museum where are kept all the objects found buried under the stones (for excavations are carried out every winter by M. le Rouzic, the curator). Here, after an inspection of the jade beads, and the gold, and the shining necklaces, and the ritual hammers, and finally a long conversation with M. le Rouzic, our enthusiasm revived and we departed with several books on the subject to enlighten us as to the age and ultimate object of these great erections.

Their ultimate object is still rather open to doubt, but the consensus declares that they were originally vast temples. There are three main series of alignments. At the west end of each stands a semicircular group of stones called a cromlech, which apparently marks the actual site of the religious ceremony, while the alignments themselves, lines of stones stretching away for the best part of a mile were the temple courts.

Uncouth as the stones seem now, they were not erected in a haphazard manner. The three great alignments of Menec, Kermario and Kerlescan are so arranged that from a certain point at the cromlech, at a certain day in the year one can see the sunrise exactly over a menhir placed by itself in the midst of the alignments. These days are the mean dates for the beginning of the different agricultural seasons, sowing, blossoming, and harvesting.

So shapeless and weatherbeaten are they that it might seem impossible to decide how old they are, but from various indications, M. le Rouzic dates the alignments from between 1200 and 2000 B. C. The menhirs, isolated stones and the dolmens, one great stone supported on several others, and used for a tomb, he puts back to not earlier than 10,000 B. C., while other forms and remains he dates as recently as 50 B. C.

Although most of the church is built of menhirs and farmhouses nestle among them, the Carnae people are said to hold strange beliefs about them. Whether they do revere them or not, the people are not averse to making money out of them, so that the market square is full slowly of small boys in striped jerseys who leap onto passing past. . .

motors and offer to act as guides to the alignments, of course for suitable remuneration.

THE CHBISTIAN SCIENCE PUBLISHING SOCIETY

With all this in our thoughts we decided to make a triumphal tour all the length of the lines from Menee in the west to Kerlescan and Petit Menee in the east. After a short walk along the dusty road we found ourselves in the midst of the alignment of Menec. The statement that there were eleven rows of stones on a base a hundred yards wide we verified for ourselves, but were content to ake on trust the statement that there are 1169 menhirs, especially as at that moment we were spied by the chileren of the nearest farm.

The first to arrive began a solemn singsong, taken up by the others in due course in unison so that even if one's breath gave out there was no pause in the narrative: "C'est ici les alignements du Menec," it began, and went on about San Cornely and a pierre de sacrifice, but was not as clear as it might have been.

The conclusion, however, several times repeated, gave no cause for complaint on the grounds of audibility. It was: "Donnez moi un franc." The francs were given, but in the excitement the youngest girl, not old enough to recite, saw her franc given to her brother, with the result that, wailing "Pas donne d'argent," she followed us all up the

These in the light of our newly acquired knowledge were undoubtedly more impressive, although the crom-lech had got hopelessly mixed up with a cow shed, and the stones at the end were really of an imposing size, completely dwarfing a party which was picnieking in their shade. As we walked back again, although they were growing smaller, the stones began to have a certain impressive-

the weather certainly was not favorable to any musings on a Celtic twilight. The sky was vividly blue, the gorse was coming into flower, the heather covered every patch of ground. Everywhere else were crickets and grasshop-pers, gray on the ground and slate blue as they jumped, and butterflies of all colors, sulphur, dark brown, honey colored, orange, slate blue. There were even a few green igards basking on the steam of ground. Everywhere else were crickets and grad lizards basking on the stones.

On and on we trudged past what seemed like neverending lines; stones in front of us, stones behind us, stones around us. They would be broken for a short distance, and then a fresh lot would come into view, towering over our heads. Here and there came a dolmen to be examined, once, under a very large menhir a little excavation where if one bent double and lit matches one could see the piles of stones which were the last resting place of some favorite slave, but for the most part it was stone after stene in unfailing received. unfailing regularity.

Even so, the impression they made was more an interesting and rather peculiar study in perspective than the monuments of a mighty and practically unknown civilization, whose worship still lingered openly in the sixteenth century and is not yet completely forgotten.

The really overwhelming realization came one evening later. Invited out by the scents of the twilight we had taken a path meandering among the fields. We began to realize how the rushing tourists and the bright sun had disguised the true desolation of the waste. In the dusk we looked for miles without seeing any sign of an inhabited disguised the true desolation of the waste. In the dusk we looked for miles without seeing any sign of an inhabited house. Behind were the lights of Carnac, in front nothing between us and the horizon to denote that any human beings had passed that way before us.

Then suddenly we climbed over one of the loose stone fences and found ourselves surrounded with dim gray shapes. As we walked silently along the ture, they crowded into view, increasing in size as if their old honor came back to them in the night. In the dark it was impossible to see where they ended, and it was quite unexpectedly to see where they ended, and it was quite unexpethat we came to the cromlech and the farmhouse. From the World's Great Capitals-Berlin

DERLIN is known for its broad streets. New York, London, Paris and other capitals naturally, too, have avenues and boulevards of exceptional breadth, but in Berlin the streets on a whole are broader than in other capitals. This is due to the comparative infartey of the German capital and the unlimited amount of space at its disposal The broadest street undoubtedly is the Bismarck Strasse in the West which has three roads, but there are countless streets with two roads on either side of a broad footpath in the center. The growing traffic, however, is inducing the City Council to widen even the few narrow roads of importance left.

The desire to facilitate the flow of traffic has also led to a remodeling of many principal squares such as the Potsdamer Platz, the Spittlemarkt and the Alexander Platz. The latest innovation is the removal of entire blocks in order to lengthen important streets One of these plans is to lengthen the Französische Strasse runparallel to Unter den Linden which, it is hoped, would greatly help the westbound traffic. For this pur-pose, however, the street would have to lead through the lovely gardens at the back of the palaces of the President, the Chancellor and the Foreign Office. The Government, however, objects to this. The President and Chancellor of the Reich as well as the Foreign Minister should be able to enjoy the quiet of the gardens undisturbed by the rumble and noise of the traffic; it is said. + + +

Speaking of streets and squares in Berlin, it may be mentioned that in the heart of the city the streets cross one another at right angles like in New York and other American cities. This greatly contributes to the thinning of the traffic, for if one street becomes too congested the drivers choose a parallel street along which they can pass with greater ease. The breadth of the roads, too, contributes to the smoother flow of traffic. As soon as the streets become narrow, as in the case of the Voss Strasse, congestion sets in.

Are the German people starting to save again? They are, though not quite so much as before the war, but the desire to set aside a little of their earnings is continually on the increase. In September alone the deposits in the Reich's savings banks increased by 90,000/ marks and have now reached a total amount of 4,246,000,000 marks. This is the best sign of a return of confidence in the stability of affairs in this country which received a severe shock, in fact was completely destroyed, during and for some time after the inflation period.

+ + Every city has its street venders who as a rule are typical representatives of their surroundings. Once a year the street venders of this city come together at the Ruett velodrome to fight for the "blue ribbon" of the street. One after the other they step onto a small platform and address the jury and the delighted spectators in the fashion they address a crowd in the street. Who scores best receives a prize. After the prize has been awarded these queer folks return to their favorite corners and resume their "business," which is one of the few that is founded on the smiles of its customers.

+ + + That Russian emigrants, as often is the case, refuse to call Petrograd by its new name Leningrad is not so very extraordinary, but that the publishers of the weather charts printed in the Berlin newspapers should blankly refuse to do so is somewhat remarkable. A reader of the Vossische Zeitung one day discovered that on the weather chart of that paper Leningrad was still called by its original name, St. Petersburg. This had passed unnoticed for more than ten years, which either goes to prove how few people study these charts or how superficially they read them when they do it. Upon making his discovery, the reader in question promptly informed the editor of this error, the editor in his turn wrote to the publishers of the weather chart asking for an explanation and this is the answer he received:

Replying to your letter we beg to state that we are of a different opinion. Naturally, we cannot deny the Russians the right to name their cities as it pleases them but it is quit the custom in Germany to continue to use German names for cities which may be called differently in their own countries. Helsingfors and Dorpat are two examples of towns for which other names have been introduced in their countries. No German, moreover, will even think of calling Bromberg or Thorn by their present Polish names. A hab't of many centuries allows us to use such hames as Mailand. Venedig, Bruessel, Prag, Kopenhagen and others.

The publishers also pointed to the remarkable faith that

The publishers also pointed to the remarkable fact that several German maps which have recently been printed still show the name of St. Petersburg instead of Leningrad This is all very well, the Vossische Zeitung replies, but what about Oslo? And would we still call Milano. "Mailand" if its name were converted some day into Mussolinopolis? But Oslo, curiously enough, is not on the weather chart in question and doubtless this confroversy will have to be ended.

will have to be ended.

The central municipal library of Berlin, which has branches in all parts of the city, has just celebrated its twentieth anniversary. In this short period it has accumulated almost 240,000 volumes. This was only possible with the help of generous donations, one of the largest of which comprised not less than 35,000 books. The reading room contains 7000 books, 350 periodicals and many German and foreign newspapers. A music library is also to be established. This municipal library is located in the building of the former imperial stables. Bovs and girls. building of the former imperial stables. Boys and girls, men and women, primarily of the working classes, now sit here and study with a view to increasing their knowledge. Surely another sign of the times.

Why did Berlin rise just where it did? Some light is thrown on this interesting question by recent excavations in the east of the city near Frankfort on the Oder, which have revealed fortifications and traces of houses thousands of years old. In fact, the "Lossower Burgwall," near Buschmuehle, has become a Pompeii of the province in which Berlin is located. The fortifications served, it is believed, to protect the shallow valleys which formed natural roads for the invaders of western Europe. The place now called Berlin eventually superseded them all, for the spot where the city now stands is the key to most of these valleys. Thus Berlin may owe its existence to its past strategic value as a bulwark against the East.

"Hello! Please connect me with Mr. Smith on board "Hello! Please connect me with Mr. Smith on board the Leviathan now three days off New York." Will we be able to say that to the telephone operator of our exchange in a few months' time? German engineers say yes In fact they have carried their experiments to such a standard of perfection that they now intend to install the first telephone apparatus of this kind on board the North German Lloyd steamer Columbus. Tests in recent years which were made secretly showed that it is possible to talk with Berlin from a few miles off the American coast. Thus the day may no longer be very distant when we shall ask for Mr. Smith on board the Leviathan who will be called by a bell boy to the little booth and will take off the receiver and talk to a relative or a business friend in New York, Berlin or London. ness friend in New York, Berlin or London.
